

Exeter Academic promotion criteria - General guidance

1. Introduction

The criteria for promotion are summarised in a single table describing expectations for each career grade in the activity categories of Research, Education and Business engagement and innovation, and in the cross cutting categories of Leadership and management, and Citizenship. Expectations in global engagement activity are reflected throughout the criteria. For each grade and category there is an overall descriptor and a series of specific criteria grouped into sub-categories. The expectations that apply to you will depend on your job family (Education & Research, Education & Scholarship, or Research), but allow for variation in the balance of achievements in recognition of the increasingly varied academic expertise and specialisms that are required in the University. The criteria articulate expectations for promotion to each grade and as a guide to performance once in that grade. You are not necessarily expected to meet all of the criteria shown in the table, but to have a preponderance of evidence appropriate for the promotion grade for your job family (see below for further details), and bearing in mind University, faculty and department strategic priorities and disciplinary norms.

2. Preparing for an Application

You should map your application to the criteria on the application form, showing clearly which of the criteria you meet and how this is evidenced, with an emphasis on achievements since your last promotion or appointment. A full cv will be required alongside your application form based on the standard cv format. The form should cross reference any specific content in the cv but generally should not repeat information contained in the cv.

There is a recognition that the weighting and balance of achievement will vary between different job roles, faculties and departments. The criteria are written as common standards for the whole University.

3. Process of assessment

a. Linking Performance and Development Review with promotion

- You should discuss your achievements and progress at least annually with your Senior Academic Lead (SAL) as part of the PDR process. This will form the basis for making decisions on the focus of your activity, level of achievement, and the timing of any application for promotion. The promotion criteria should be used to guide these conversations. You must confirm that you have had a recent PDR when you submit an application for promotion.

b. Department assessment and feedback

- Once you have decided to take the application to the next stage, you should draft a submission including a self evaluation of your performance, with the assistance of your SAL assessing the extent to which you meet the criteria in each sub category. This should include a summary of your level of achievement and the balance of achievement on which you are basing your case for support.
- If your SAL is supportive of your application, then the Head of Department will review your application and provide a response to your assessment with feedback. The HoD may consult with your SAL and other senior leaders in the department, as well as the Faculty DPVC, on the content before providing a response.

- If the HoD and department are not supportive of your application then feedback will focus on any areas identified for further improvement and advice and support for a future application. If the HoD and department are supportive of your application, then it will be submitted to the Faculty.

c. Faculty and University assessment and feedback

- For promotions up to Grade G, the application will be considered at the annual Faculty promotions panel. Decisions will be accompanied by summary feedback. If the Faculty are not supportive of your application then feedback will focus on any areas identified for further improvement and advice and support for a future application.
- For promotions to Associate Professor and Professor, there will be a Faculty assessment panel to decide if your application will proceed to external review. Decisions will be accompanied by summary feedback. If the Faculty are not supportive of your application then feedback will focus on any areas identified for further improvement and advice and support for a future application.
- If the faculty support your application, a minimum of three external reviews will be sought and your application and reviews will be considered by the University promotions panel. Decisions will be accompanied by summary feedback. If the University panel are not supportive of your application then feedback will focus on any areas identified for further improvement and advice and support for a future application.

4. Expectations

For most staff, you are expected to achieve all of the criteria in one of the main categories, supported by achievement at a range of levels (grades) in other categories. Minimum levels of achievement for some categories are set for individual job families (see 4). All staff are expected to meet the criteria for citizenship at the grade for which they are applying for promotion. If your role is more highly specialised, you may make a case based primarily on a single activity category (Research, Education or Business Engagement and Innovation), but you will be expected to clearly exceed the minimum quality level of achievement indicated for that category and to have a more substantial volume of achievements.

Note that the research criteria are written in accordance with expectations at that grade for E&R staff and the education criteria are written in accordance with expectations at that grade for E&S staff. This means that E&R staff are not expected to achieve (for example) professorial level criteria in Education if they are applying for promotion to professor.

If you are part-time, have had career breaks or have a significant clinical or other professional practice component, this will be taken into account when considering the volume of activity and evidence, but the quality of activity and evidence should meet the criteria. If applicable, you should complete the section about special circumstances affecting the balance of achievement across specific aspects of your role (e.g. international travel conflicting with caring responsibilities) so that panels can take this into account in the assessment process.

5. Balance of achievement: minimum levels of achievement by job family

A balanced scorecard approach will be taken in overall evaluation of your case for support. The overall descriptors for each grade and category should be used as a guide for assessing whether your combination of achievements reaches an appropriate level. The balance of your activity and achievement should be regularly discussed with your Senior Academic Lead as part of regular PDR (Performance and Development Review) conversations, consulting with your Head of Department if necessary.

Note that there is no separate job family for Business engagement and innovation. The criteria are designed to allow a focus on Business engagement and innovation activity in any job family, as well as to recognise and reward BEI activity as part of the overall portfolio of activity.

a. Education and Research job family

Lecturer: All of the Research, Education and leadership and management criteria at Lecturer level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or by meeting additional criteria in Business engagement and innovation or Leadership and management at Lecturer level.

Senior Lecturer: All of the Research criteria at Senior Lecturer level and the Education criteria at least to Lecturer level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or meeting further criteria in Business engagement and innovation or Leadership and management at Senior Lecturer level.

Associate Professor: All of the Research criteria at Associate Professor level and the Education criteria at least to Senior Lecturer level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or meeting further criteria in Business engagement and innovation or leadership and management at Associate Professor level.

Professor: All of the Research criteria at Professorial level and the Education criteria at least to Senior Lecturer level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or meeting further criteria in Business engagement and innovation or leadership and management at Professorial level.

b. Education and scholarship job family

Lecturer: All of the Education criteria at Lecturer level, including elements of the additional criteria, and the leadership and management criteria at Lecturer level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or meeting further criteria in Business engagement and innovation or Research.

Senior Lecturer: All of the Education criteria at Senior Lecturer level, including elements of the additional criteria, and the Leadership and management criteria at least to Lecturer level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or meeting further criteria in Business engagement and innovation, Leadership and management or Research at Senior Lecturer level.

Associate Professor: All of the Education criteria at Associate Professor level and the Leadership and management criteria at least to Senior Lecturer level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or meeting further criteria in Business engagement and innovation or leadership and management or Research at Associate Professor level.

Professor: All of the Education criteria at Professorial level and the Leadership and management criteria at least to Associate Professor level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or meeting further criteria in Business engagement and innovation, Leadership and management or Research at Professorial level.

c. Research job family

Lecturer: All of the Research criteria at Research Fellow level, the leadership and management criteria at Lecturer level and achievement of some criteria in Education at Research Fellow level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or meeting further criteria in Business engagement and innovation.

Senior Lecturer: All of the Research criteria at Senior Research Fellow level, the Leadership and management criteria at least to Lecturer level and by achievement of some criteria in Education at Research Fellow level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or meeting further criteria in Business engagement and innovation, Leadership and management or Education at Senior Lecturer level.

At AP and P, the E&R and R only job families converge and you will be assessed on the same basis as E&R staff, bearing in mind the time you are likely to have spent in the balance of research and education activities:

Associate Professor: All of the Research criteria at Associate Professor level and the Education criteria at least to Senior Lecturer level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or meeting further criteria in Business engagement and innovation or leadership and management at Associate Professor level.

Professor: All of the Research criteria at Professorial level and the Education criteria at least to Senior Lecturer level. If any of these criteria are not met, they may be balanced by significant over-performance against the remaining criteria or meeting further criteria in Business engagement and innovation or leadership and management at Professorial level.

Leadership & management

Regardless of career grade, there is an expectation that all academic staff evidence an element of leadership and management within their role appropriate to their level of seniority. Specific examples will be varied, but in all cases, there should be evidence of successful achievement through the activity and in roles carried out. Examples of leadership may also be included in Education, Research, and Business Engagement and Innovation, but if an example of leadership has been referenced elsewhere, it should not be included in this category – that is, there should be no double-counting of contributions.

Citizenship

All academics are expected to contribute to the smooth running of their academic unit and the University, guided by our institutional values of discovery, respect, excellence, inclusion and community. Good citizenship is just as much about how engagement takes place as well as what activity is undertaken. In evidencing examples of citizenship, it is expected that colleagues will be able to demonstrate generous, mutually respectful and supportive working relationships with all staff and students, engagement with equality, diversity and inclusion, and adherence to University, faculty and departmental policies and codes of practice.

Examples of University citizenship may also be included in Education, Research, and Business Engagement and Innovation, but if an example of citizenship has been referenced elsewhere, it should not be included in this category – that is, there should be no double-counting of contributions. External citizenship should specifically not be used as evidence here but should be referred to under the appropriate activity category.
